Dear Tony,

We are thinking of devoting most of the issue of REALITY for which the deadline is the last week in January to articles discussing various educational questions.

We are thinking of having something on "People's Education", have asked Conor Cruise O'Brien for his views on the future of the universities here and would like to have an article discussing a possible future education system which attempts to fuse the best in 'liberal' education with the best ideas behind 'people's' education. Jonno Paton said you had some thoughts on this question which you expressed at the recent Kenton conference and thought you would be the man for the job? How about it? Length would be about 3,000 words and the deadline, as I said, the end of January.

We would be delighted if you would do it -- and I hope you will.

Regards,
