You'd better read Part 2 in Noseweek and judge for yourself where it all comes from. Not Swanepoel, I think. Not worth publishing either. I talked to Hugh about it in Joh'burg and he felt strongly that I should put in my own rebuttal or it would stay 'on the record' for future scribblers to copy. I am just too tied up to tackle it now but when I have a gap I hope to do it. This apart from Neville's and my intention to do a serious piece for the SA Historical Journal on the CCF in S A. They want this from us.

What can you want this personal stuff for? Sounds a bit like the Noseweek approach? Anyway my answers are:

10.7.28, Kimberley
St Andrew's College, Grahamstown
Wadham College, Oxford
publisher and editor until 1980s, now historian
Great Britain
Married 1953 with son, born 1957 and daughter born 1960.

I hadn't heard about Flip Green. When did this tragedy happen? There are words missing in your message.

Caroline and I had a pleasant lunch in London last week. I kept off the subject of Noseweek as we clearly aren't on the same wavelength about it. Pat Cullinan had telephoned her, after I'd told him about it.

When do you go to SA for the lectures?
