Dear William,

Thank you for your letter of October 20th. I have decided to send the Clayton book to Trevor Huddleston, and if he thinks it is good he can send it on to you; if he thinks it is moderate he can send it back to me. It is true that of its thirty-three chapters only the first five are placed in England, so I would hesitate to pass a judgement that it would prove readable in England. Nevertheless I hope that may be Huddleston's opinion.

Yours ever

Alan Paton
