Dear Rodney,

Thank you for your letter and enclosures. The Xeroxing is quite dear enough for me, and I thank you very much for sending it. It is a valuable addition to my material. I dare say that had I known more about Clayton's life, which was not public in the sense that Hofmeyr's was public, I would have made many more such finds. However, on the whole I think the book will be the best that can be done. Clayton himself did not want a biography and destroyed most of his papers except, interestingly enough, the great number of letters written to him when he was elected Archbishop, and of course his sermons.

Thank you again for your help. I am enclosing R1.00 for expenses.

Yours gratefully,
