Dear Alan.

I was so very glad to have had an opportunity of seeing your very important latest ms. I could not <sup>let</sup> hold of Trevor Huddleston to find where to send comments as he was in a retreat so I sent them to the box no in Natal (278 Hillcrest) but in case that letter doesn't reach you for any reason am sending herewith another copy. + have limited comment to matters of fact that you may find helpful and pencilled two or three pts in two chapters about things I know about, which can of course be erased. It is difficult to write about other matters under the circumstances but would it be presumptuous to say that if a man's greatness of character is being assessed it must be measured against what he overcomes as well as what he achieved? ? Everyone has his own particular thorn in the flesh, <sup>as G.C. did</sup> and his own problem of dealing with it must necessarily affect his handling of the more general problems that he is called upon to face up to by virtue of the very position he has attained through his accomplishments. I cannot be more explicit in a letter, and without referring to matters which you have <sup>probably</sup> given very careful thought to and have had opportunity of discussing with others more knowledgeable than myself. I must leave it to the great wisdom and sense of justice and concern for people as well as historical truth that you have shown to be your guide on the worth of what I am saying.

On the matters I have mentioned in the enclosed Tubby Eaton and Harry Leach if he were still alive <sup>(his wife is I think)</sup> could have thrown more light on what happened.

I do wish you well in all you are doing and wish I could be more helpful than is possible by correspondence as things are.

Yours ever,

Michael
