My dear Charlie,

You must pardon me for not having written earlier to acknowledge the presentation copy of Charles Lindberg's book. The truth is that when I returned I was not able to settle down to reading it, but now I have, and it was quite magnificent. I have only one regret and that is that he brought it so abruptly to an end. I would like to have read more of the great sensation which his flight occasioned. The directness and simplicity of his writing was also magnificent and I am honoured to have been the recipient of a book which thousands of people with better and equally good claims would have given a great deal to have.

Kindest regards.

Yours ever,
