Dear Miss Horwitz,

I think that you have chosen the most relevant passages, and that your material will be of great help to me. I spent all day yesterday reading it over and comparing it with my other information.

I enclose cheque for £30 and am quite willing to pay for any expenses you may have incurred.

You would help me a great deal if you would check on one big matter and a number of small ones. You must not be frightened when you see the long list. Some of these things you will be able to check immediately by merely looking up the relevant page. However, you will see I am not always sure when you give a page which volume you are referring to. Please let me know what extra time you put in on this work, and I shall of course pay you at the same rate as before.

The bog matter is concerned with 1936. That was of course, psychologically, a very important time in Hofmeyr's life, because he opposed Smuts on the Native Bills and made a famous speech during the third reading. I feel sure that you must have omitted it for some good reason and perhaps you will tell me what it is. The other points are detailed on attached pages.

I must say that on reading the notes you have sent me, I find the quotations very much to the point, and it is probably a good thing that you did not quote more fully. Many thanks.

Yours sincerely,
