Dear David,

Here are five matters for your consideration. They are the last, I think.

1. Page-proof 29 - Leslie Blackwell - Is this too harsh? Blackwell knew Hoffie well, and his good opinion might be worth something. I know that in making suggestions, one cannot insert anything that takes more room than the original. Could we say, "Years later Judge Leslie Blackwell, a man forthright to a point some thought rudeness". If not, STET.
2. Page-proof 44, lines 5 - 9. I say we shall have to consider the question, but in fact we never do. Should we say,

"Yet one might well ask whether his creative gift was not limited by South Africa itself, a country whose parliamentary politics have for many years been devoted to a preservation of white supremacy and of the status quo, a strengthening of racial barriers and a raising of new barriers like them. One might well ask what creativity was possible under such circumstances".
3. Page-proof 71, 3rd complete para, I write "Its students, today one of the most vigorous anti-apartheid groups in the country, owe nothing...." Could we say, more accurately -

"Many of its students are today the most vigorous opponents of apartheid in the country, yet owe nothing..."
4. Page-proof 77, 3 lines from foot - I wrote "was to" but this is ambiguous, and might mean, not that this was the Council's vision, but that I myself think it is the finest. Could we delete "was to", and substitute "must"? Does that meet the case?
5. "Students' Christian Association" This is how I have spelt it - throughout I hope. But I own a book published by the "Student Christian Association", and a receipt issued by the "Students Christian Association". Margaret Nash, who used to work for the SCA., says "Students* Christian Association was correct in her day. Shall we stick to it? And should we put a footnote to P.13, (10 lines from foot), saying, "The first word of the name was sometimes spelt "Students", sometimes "Student"?"

By this same mail I am returning Control Proof of page-proofs, and shall send back the galleys and typescript in a day or two.

All good wishes.

Yours ever,
