Dear Prof. Lindfors,

This is a quick note to thank you for your letter of April 19, 1993 and to let you know that I will be sending you my piece on David Maillu later this month. He was very excited when I told him you had requested me to do some work on him. When he came to my office for an interview, he brought me several copies of his books, a number of which had disappeared from my shelves.

So, just be patient. Don't shut me out of a programme for a delay which might very well be caused by the international mailing system.

Yours Sincerely,

Henry Indangasi

Dear Prof. Lindfors,

You probably feel like murdering me for this delay, and I wouldn't blame you for it. But the delay was unavoidable. I ran into several difficulties getting some of Maillu's books, a number of which were out of print and unavailable in our public libraries.

At the beginning of June, I had a few gaps to fill, and then my work was interrupted as I had to go to the University of Dar es Salaam as External Examiner for a whole week. It really was a difficult time for me, especially as I kept thinking of your courses.

Anyway, here is the piece. See what you can do with and keep in touch.

Yours Sincerely,
